Bodies Still Unidentified. Although Coroner Crowe and hi deputies have been making streng ous efforts to establish the identity of the young man who committed suicide at San Mateo Beach and the woman whose decomposed body was found at Holy Cross Cemetery, their efforts have as yet been without result. Letters have been written to many parties throughout the state many parties throughout the state and several persons looking for miss ing relatives have called at the morgue and viewed the remains of the deceased persons, but the identification of neither body has been made. It was thought by the coroner that the body of the San Mater Beach suicide was that of Jessie S Prince who mysteriously disappeared from Benicia on the 3d inst, but a brother of the missing Mr. Prince and a sister-in-law called at the morgue and being unable to view the body, the same having been buried, made a careful examination of the clothing and effects of the dead man and dealered nositively that the body and declared positively that the body and declared positively that the body of the unfortunate young man now lying in a grave marked "unknown" in Union Cemetery, was not that of their missing relative.

Coroner Crowe is, however, still bending every energy to do all within his power to do, as the law requires of him to ascertain who the deceased persons are and how when deceased persons are, and how, when and where they met their respective

One of the greatest millionaires of our country lived before he made his millions on $8 a week and at a time We saved all the rest of his salary for judicious investments. He had been a poor boy, accustomed to a frugal mode of life. He began his career in the city sweeping out a store for $3.50 a week. Later he was advanced to $7.50. The mode of living which he was obliged to adopt as a boy he considered quite good enough for later years, especially when he saw that by denying himself for awhile longer he might make the experiences and hard knocks he had gained count for more than a mere liv ing. He might have argued that he was doing pretty well to earn $10,000 a year and that he deserved to enjoy it. But he preferred to use his earnings to make more money that some day he might be able to dispense with a salaried position altogether.
